Summary of reasons for decision:

The computer moving image file is deemed objectionable because it tends to promote and support the use of coercion to compel any person to participate in, or submit to, sexual conduct.

The short clip on the file appears to be hand-held camera footage explicitly showing a man surreptitiously performing a sexual act on a naked young woman who lies inert throughout. There is no evidence that she is a party to the activity. The title confirms this interpretation of the clip as showing the sexual exploitation of a woman who is unable to give consent. The clip, therefore, encourages a form of sexual assault and reinforces attitudes that lead to the use of coercion in sexual situations.

The classification of this publication interferes with the right to freedom of expression set out in the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990. However, this is an outcome that is consistent with Parliament's intention and is a reasonable limitation on the freedom of expression. The classification reflects the concern of a free and democratic society to prevent sexual coercion.
